International Forum for Stakeholders and Experts

Monday, November 17, 2014 (10.00 am - 7.00 pm)

Heinrich Böll Stiftung
Schumannstr. 8
10117 Berlin

The ongoing negotiations about the Transatlantic Trade and Investment Partnership (TTIP) have been accompanied by two massive campaigns: The trade and industry lobbies have been portraying the prospective treaty as a promise for economies and strategic cooperation in Europe, the US and beyond. Large shares of global civil societies have been mobilizing against the treaty - they point to the risks for consumer protection, environment and justice around the world.

During this conference we look at what has been accomplished and discuss what lies ahead. We broaden the topics and invite voices from outside Germany and Europe to bring their perspectives to the table. We offer an opportunity for stakeholders and experts to discuss and learn from each other about issues that might one day determine how we live, trade and consume.

The open discussion format allows to gain new perspectives and participate in discussions. Civil society representatives are invited to distribute their materials and advocate for their causes at open tables. A networking room offers an opportunity to reconnect with old partners and make new contacts.
